

previous slides are here: https://github.com/rebleo/infoWeb2018/blob/master/week04/strmSrvr.pdf

designing for the web

Unlike other programming languages - HTML, CSS + JavaScript were authored for their outputs to be read or seen by human persons on glowing rectangular screens GUIs.

960 PIXELS WIDE

Art and design

News: Fleetwood Mac to reunite in 2012

Alexis Petridis interviews Donovan

Tilda Swinton: 'It's bloody having a child'

Full coverage: Cannes 2011

Diary: Will I ever leave Hotel Cannes-ifornia?

css positioning

Box Dimensions

By default the box is sized just big enough to hold its contents. Use the height + width properties to set your own dims.

min-width, max-width min-height, max-height

- `px` traditionally, the most popular way of specifying the size of a box
- `%` the size of the box is relative to the size of the browser window, or if the box is inside another box.
- `em` the size of the box is are don the size of the txt inside it.

 Designers have recently started to use % + ems more as they are flexible across platforms + devices
- `rem` Relative to font-size of the root element. check it here

Border

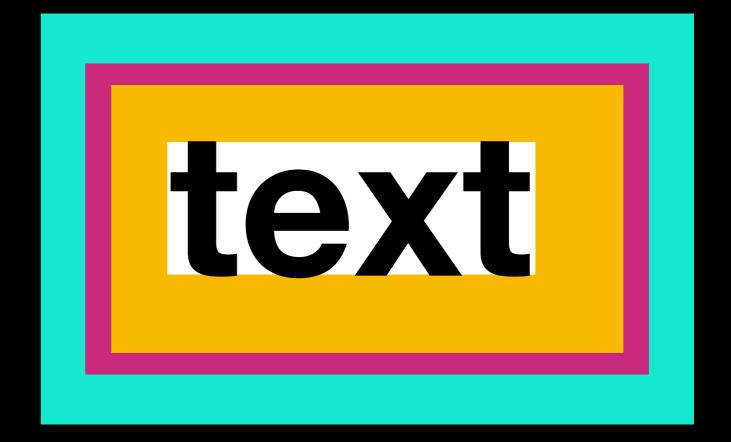

All boxes have borders even if invisible or 0px wide. It separates the edge of one box from another.

Margin

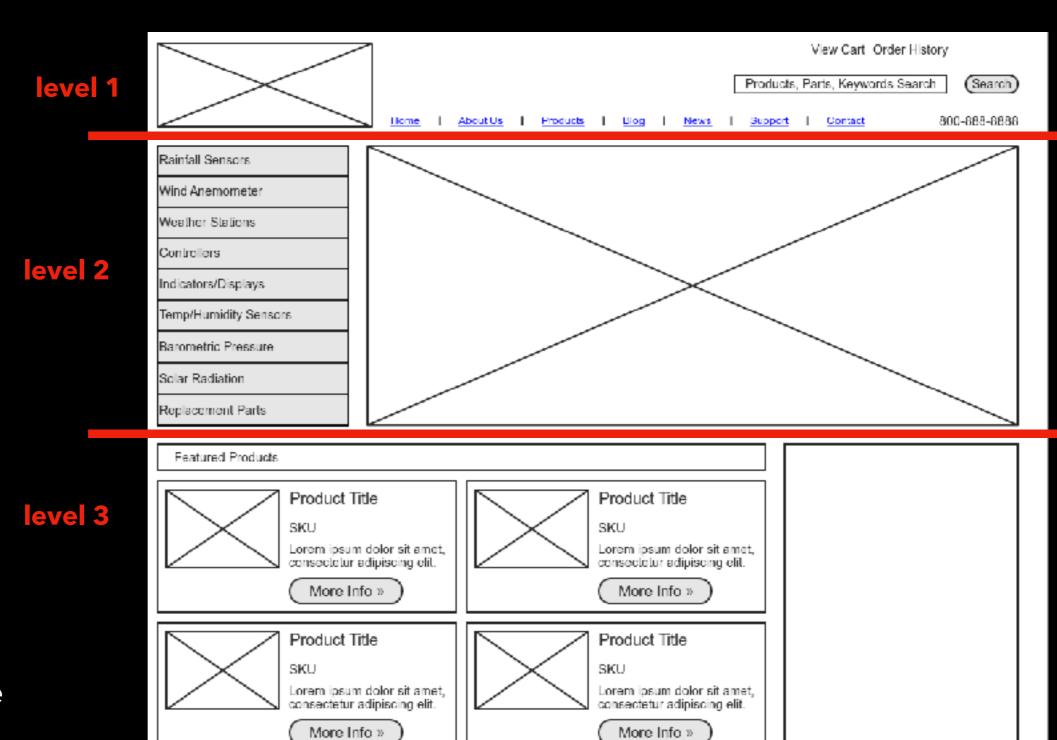

Margins sit outside the edge of the border. You can set the width to create a gap btw borders of adjacent boxes.

Padding

Padding is the space btw the border + any content contained within it. More padding increases the readability of its contents.

Containing Elements

Block level level 3

elements start on a new line – if a block-level element sits inside another then the outer box is the containing or parent element.

Controlling the Position of Elements

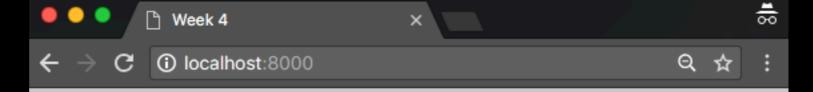

Normal Flow

Every block-level element appears on a new line, causing each item to appear lower down on the page. Even if you specify the width of the boxes + there is space they will not appear nxt to each other.

.thePosition {

background: pink;
position: static;

}

Intro to CSS Positioning

There is then as I am saying complete disillusion in living, the realis- ing, completely realising that not any one, not one fighting for the same thinking and believing as the other, not any one has the same believing in her or in him that any other one has in them and it comes then some- time to most every one to be realising with feeling this thing and then they often stop having friendly feeling and then often they begin again but it is then a different thing between them, they are old then and not young then in their feeling.

Young ones sometimes think they have it in them, this thing, some young ones kill themselves then, stop living then, this is often happen- ing, young ones sometimes, very often even, think they have in them this thing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any young one, as a complete realisation, this thing, they have it in them and it is sometimes, very often then an agony to them, some of them kill themselves or are killed then, but really mostly not any of them have really realised the thing, they may be dead from this thing, they have not realised the thing, it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really grasped the thing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even have killed completely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this is pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Hersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what there was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

This is then a very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing. There is this thing then there is the moment and a very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or loved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that no one will think it a nice thing and then some one likes that thing and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating.

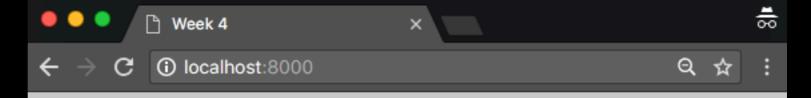

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Relative Positioning

This moves an element from the position it would be in normal flow, shifting it to the top, right, bottom, or left where it would have been placed. This does not affect the position of surrounding elements; they stay in the position they would be in normal flow.

```
.thePosition {

background: pink;
position: relative;
top: 50px;
right: 100px;
```

Intro to CSS Positioning

There is then as I am saying complete disillusion in living, the realis- ing, completely realising that not any one, not one fighting for the same thinking and believing as the other, not any one has the same believing in her or in him that any other one has in them and it comes then some- time to most every one to be realising with feeling this thing and then they often stop having friendly feeling and then often they begin again but it is then a different thing between them, they are old then and not young then in their feeling.

Young ones sometimes think they have it in them, this thing, some young ones kill themselves then, stop living then, this is often happen- ing, young ones sometimes, very often even, think they have in them this thing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any young one, as a complete realisation, this thing, they have it in them and it is sometimes, very often then an agony to them, some of them kill themselves or are killed then, but really mostly not any of them have really realised the thing, they may be dead from this thing, they have not realised the thing, it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really grasped the thing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even have killed completely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this is pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Hersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what there was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing. There is this thing then there is the very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that no one will think it a nice thing one likes that thing and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating.

e fighting with

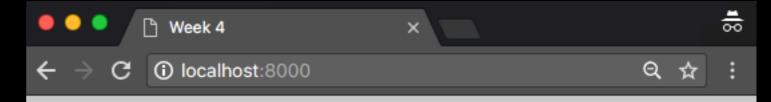

Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Absolute Positioning

This positions the element in relation to its containing element. It is taken out of normal flow, meaning that it does not affect the position of any surrounding elements. An absolutely positioned element no longer exists in the normal document layout flow. Instead, it sits on its own layer separate from everything else. Absolutely positioned elements move as users scroll up + down.

```
background: pink;
position: absolute;
top: 50px;
right: 100px;
```

.thePosition {

Intro to CSS Positioning

This is then a very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing. There is this thing then there is the moment and a very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or loved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that no one will think it a nice thing and then some one likes that thing nost every and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating. men reening.

sing that not the same and then often ung then in

Young ones sometimes think they have it in them, this thing, some young ones kill themselves then, stop living then, this is often happen- ing, young ones sometimes, very often even, think they have in them this thing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any young one, as a complete realisation, this thing, they have it in them and it is sometimes, very often then an agony to them, some of them kill themselves or are killed then, but really mostly not any of them have really realised the thing, they may be dead from this thing, they have not realised the thing, it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really grasped the thing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even have killed completely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this is pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Hersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what there was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Notice that the position of the element has changed this is because top, bottom, left, and right behave in a different way with absolute positioning.

Instead of specifying the direction the element should move in, they specify the distance the element should be from each containing element's sides.

So in this case, we are saying that the absolutely positioned element should sit 50px from the top of the "containing element", and 100px from the right.

Intro to CSS Positioning

This is then a very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing. There is this hing then there is the moment and a very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or loved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that no one will think it a nice thing and then some one likes that thing nost every and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating. men reenng.

sing that not the same and then often ung then in

Young ones sometimes think they have it in them, this thing, some young ones kill themselves then, stop living then, this is often happen- ing, young ones sometimes, very often even, think they have in them this thing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any young one, as a complete realisation, this thing, they have it in them and it is sometimes, very often then an agony to them, some of them kill themselves or are killed then, but really mostly not any of them have really realised the thing, they may be dead from this thing, they have not realised the thing, it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really grasped the thing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even have killed completely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this is pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Hersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what there was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

```
.thePosition {
   background: pink;
   position: absolute;
   top: 100px;
   bottom: 100px;
   left: 100px;
   right: 100px;
}
```

Intro to CSS Positioning

There is then as I am saying complete disillusion in living, the realis- ing, completely realising that not any one, not one fighting for the same thinking and believing as the other, not any one has the same believing in harmonic in his is then a very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing. nost every one to be realiable this thing then there is the moment and a very complete moment they begin agato those that have had it when something they have bought or made or their feeling. loved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that Young ones so then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates stop living the the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be them this thin illustrating.

Ives then, the thing the thing illustrating.

thing, they have themselves or be dead from a not really gras perhaps even I really such a tradisillusion- mobe certain from necessary thin Disillusionme with you. Disi for you. Comp amount they a realised by yo strangers and Gertrud Stein.

lves then, hey have in ealisation, this them kill ng, they may m, they have i, it may one has not n of ring trying to i a completely were fighting it are fighting e. The oletely urself and left right X axis top bottom Y axis

Intro to CSS Positioning

There is then as I am saying complete disillusion in living, the realis- ing, completely realising that not any me, not one fighting for the same believing and believing as the other, not any one has the same believing in er or in him that any of the base in them and it comes then some-time to most every one to be realising with feeling this thing and then they often stop having friendly feeling and then often they begin again but it is then a different thing between them, they are old then and not young then in their feeling.

Young ones sometimes think they have it in them, this thing, some young ones kill themselves then, stop iving then, this is often happen-ing, young ones sometimes, very often even, think they have in them this hing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any young one, as a complete realisation, this thing, they ave it in them and it is sometimes, very often then an agony to them, some of them kill themselves or are filled then, but really mostly not any of them have really realised the thing, they may be dead from this hing, they have not realised the thing, it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really grasped the hing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even (witch, he ompletely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this s pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Iersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what here was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

noment and a very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or oved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, ver be carful that no one will think it a nice thing and then some one likes that thing and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating.

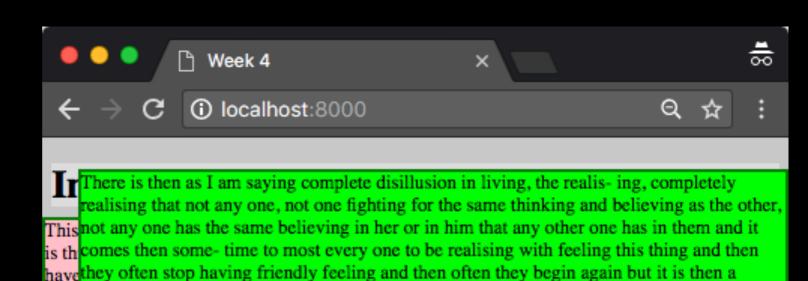

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Floating Elements

Floating an element allows you to take that element out of normal flow. The floated element becomes a block-level element around which other content can flow.

Web pages also have a z-axis: an imaginary line that runs from the surface of your screen, towards your face. z-index values affect where positioned elements sit on that axis; positive values move them higher up the stack, and negative values move them lower down the stack. By default, positioned elements all have a z-index of auto, which is effectively 0

```
background: lime;
position: absolute;
top: 10px;
left: 30px;
z-index: 1;
```

that different thing between them, they are old then and not young then in their feeling. thing and then some one likes that thing and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very s, very often y mostly not y have not wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating.

y have not reassed the thing, it has been an awrus agony in them, they have not reassy grasped the thing as having general human meaning, it has been a shock to them, it may perhaps even have killed completely very completely some of them, mostly then a young one has not really such a thing in them, this is pretty nearly certain, later there will be much description of disillusion- ment in the being of David Hersland who was always in his living as I was saying trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what there was in living that could make it for him a completely necessary thing.

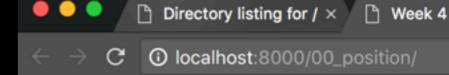

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Overlapping Elements

When you use relative, fixed or absolute positioning, boxes can overlap. If they do the elements later in the HTML will sit on top of those that are earlier in the page.

When you move any element form normal flow, boxes can overlap. The z-index property allow you to control which box appears on top. It's value is a number, + the hight the number the closer that element is to the top.

Often referred to as STACKING CONTEXT + is similar to "bring to front" + "send to back features."

There is then as I am saying complete disillusion in living, the realis- ing, confighting for the same thinking and believing as the other, not any one has the one has in them and it comes then some- time to most every one to be realising stop having friendly feeling and then often they begin again but it is then a diand not young then in their feeling.

thing but they do not have it in them, mostly not any your complete realisation, this thing, they have it in them any very often then an agony to them, some of them kill the killed then, but really mostly not any of them have real thing, they may be dead from this thing, they have not it has been an awful agony in them, they have not really as having general human meaning, it has been a shock perhaps even have killed completely very completely semostly then a young one has not really such a thing in the nearly certain, later there will be much description of do the being of David Hersland who was always in his living trying to be certain from clay to day in his living what that could make it for him a completely necessary thing

This is then a very little description of feeling disillusion. There is this thing then there is the moment and a very to those that have had it when something they have bouloved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain no one will think it a nice thing and then some one like this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, the I will now be illustrating.

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agree those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fit Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no or can't change. The amount they agree is important to you they do not agree with you is completely realised by you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for strangers and this then makes an old man or an old wor

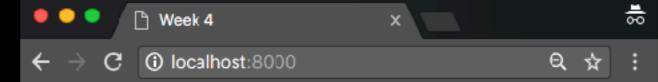

Fixed Positioning

This is a form of absolute positioning that positions the element in relation to the browser window, as opposed to the containing element.

Elements w/ fixed positioning do not affect the position of surrounding elements + they do not move when the user scrolls up and down the page.

```
.thePosition {
```

```
background: pink;
position: fixed;
top: 0;
width: 50px;
margin: 0 auto;
padding: 10px;
```

This is then a very little description of feeling disillusionment in liv- ing.

There is this thing then there is the moment and a very complete moment to those that have had it when something they have bought or made or loved or are is a thing that they are afraid, almost certain, very fearful that no one will think it a nice thing and then some one likes that thing and this then is a very wonderful feeling to know that some one really appreciates the thing. This is a very wonderful thing, this is a thing which I will now be illustrating.

Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are and were fighting with you. Disillusionment in living is the finding out nobody agrees with you not those that are fighting for you. Complete disillusionment is when you realise that no one can for they can't change. The amount they agree is important to you until the amount they do not agree with you is completely realised by you. Then you say you will write for yourself and strangers, you will be for yourself and strangers and this then makes an old man or an old woman of you.

Position Sticky

